THE FUTURE OF THE EURO AREA

COVID-19 RESPONSE AND RECOVERY

Virtual
27 May 2020

OMFIF high-level seminar
OVERVIEW

The Covid-19 health crisis prompted governments to respond with far-reaching packages, along with Europe-wide measures. This has opened new questions on the future of the euro area. Looking at how the external shock has highlighted structural issues at European level, this seminar discusses solidarity and Eurogroup response compared with the role of national governments. It considers the role of fiscal response alongside monetary policy and the European Central Bank bond-buying package. Further topics include the steps towards recovery, establishing a more integrated fiscal framework, central bank toolkits, and how the ‘European green deal’ could provide stimulus.

GENERAL ARRANGEMENTS

The meeting is online and scheduled to attract more than 100 participants from public sector institutions, including central banks, sovereign funds, regulatory agencies and government departments. Representatives from international financial institutions and the private sector will also participate. Proceedings are on-the-record. All participants are invited to ask questions. Presentation slides are kept to a minimum and will be circulated to participants after the meeting.
